Introduction

Relationships

- Over time, the GAC has realized the value of relationships with other member communities within ICANN
- The GAC has traditionally emphasized bilateral connections at every ICANN meeting with the Board and other SOs and ACs
- Those connections are very helpful to maintain lines of communication and facilitate collaboration as operational and public policy issues evolve
- “Intersessional” work has substantially increased in recent years. This also makes contacts with other communities more important and creates opportunities for collaboration. (examples, ALAC, ccNSO, GNSO)

Responsibilities

As a member of the Empowered Community, the GAC is expected or often asked to participate in cross community opportunities that include various types of reviews, assessments and various operational oversight matters.
