Early Warning Description – This will be posted publicly:

Reliance India is seeking the use of gTLD ‘Indian’. The term Indian is primarily used to describe anything related to Indian; its people, culture, product etc. An exclusive right granted to a private company could be against the public interest of the Indian community.

The Government of India wishes to express its objection to the application submitted by Reliance Industries Limited. This gTLD domain should be managed by the government of India for the interest of all members of the community including private companies.

Reason/Rationale for the Warning – This will be posted publicly:

The relationship between the Indian and the community it represents is obvious and can be demonstrated as follows:-

Indian is the distinctive term used to reflect any feature/product of India. The label Indian is associated with many products/services produced in India only. The word Indians is used extensively to represent the products and services such as Indian Software industry, Indian cuisine etc.

According to Indian trade mark legislation the designation ‘Indian’ denotes geographical region in relation to goods and services.

For the above reasons the word Indian and the management of the corresponding gTLD belong to the Indian community as a whole and should not be considered by a single private entity.
Possible Remediation steps for Applicant – This will be posted publicly:

| 1. | The applicant should demonstrate how they can work closely with the Indian government to establish how the “.indians” gTLD will not disadvantage the 1.2 billion Indians in the country. |
| 2. | The applicant should collaborate with the Indian government and the multi-stakeholder community and re-establish the “.indians” gTLD as a TLD in the public interest of all Indians, and not solely for the benefit of the applicant. |
