深圳 (Shenzhen in English), the name of the administrative region including Shenzhen City, Guangdong Province, the People's Republic of China, is a geographical name.

The Chinese Government does not support the “.深” application at this stage.

Reason/Rationale for the Warning – This will be posted publicly:

GAC Member(s) to indicate the reason and rationale for the Early Warning being filed.

Established in 1980, Shenzhen (“深” in Chinese) is the first special economic zone in China. Shenzhen has been a touchstone for China's reform and opening-up policy since then. It is a symbol in the process of industrialization, urbanization and modernization in China.

The city is the high-tech and manufacturing hub of southern China, home to the world's fourth-busiest container port, and the fourth-busiest airport on the Chinese mainland. It is one of the country's most popular tourist destinations. The high-tech, financial services, modern logistics and cultural industries are mainstays of the city. New industries of strategic importance and modern service industries are quickly becoming new engines for the city's economic growth.

Shenzhen is a city full of passion, with a deeply rooted volunteer culture. Being the City Favored by Migrant Workers at the most, it promotes Project Care each year to increase care for venerable groups, and has thus been called "a city without winter."

With picturesque coastal site, Shenzhen is a popular tourist destination in South China and has been listed by the Chinese Government as an Excellent Tourist City. It was named one of the world's 31 must-see tourist destinations in 2010 by The New York Times.

The 32-year-old city is stepping up to change models of economic development and build an innovative, energy-saving and environment-friendly city where people can reside happily.

Therefore, without the authorization of the Shenzhen Municipal People's Government, any organization should not use “深圳” as a generic Top-level Domain Name.

The Chinese Government does not support the “.深圳” application at this stage.
